Tyndall Galleries in Chapel Hill, NC, is presenting LYNN BOGGESS: New Landscape Painting, on view through Dec. 31, 2015.

Boggess, a solo exhibit of new oil paintings of the West Virginia landscape by this widely acclaimed and nationally renowned WV artist.

"Throughout the history of landscape painting, images of water have comprised a special category of inspiration," relates Boggess. "And indeed, it is my favorite element to paint. The type of impasto painting that I do is ideally suited to capturing its glassy surface, rhythmic movement, reflective illusions, and mysterious transparencies. Summer temperatures allow me to set my easel closer to its edge, and in shallow depths - actually in it. Winter, though, is a very interesting time to paint water. The freezing and thawing cycles, from liquid to solid to gas, is endlessly fascinating."

Sunset River Marketplace in Calabash, NC, Features Rustic Holiday Show

Sunset River Marketplace art gallery in Calabash, NC, is featuring an exhibition of holiday-themed rustic decor through Dec. 31, 2015. The eclectic show, which is titled A Sunset River Holiday, includes a variety of primitive pieces along with traditional Christmas pottery, hand-blown glass, paintings, holiday table runners, placemats and other items.

On a table near the gallery entrance is a trio of snowmen, which were hand-carved and painted by Roseann Bellinger, an oil painter who exhibits at the gallery. She also crocheted their scarves. Hanging on the stunning antique oak mantle are crisp linen Christmas stockings hand sewn by Mona Bendin, who also exhibits her line of pillows at the gallery. A piece of picket fencing leans against one wall. Hanging on one of the slats is a Santa-motif garden bell by clay artist Betsy Parker, whose raku pottery, clay serving pieces and wall hangings are exhibited toward the back of the gallery.

Featured on the wall are two unusual folk art pieces designed by gallery owner Ginny Lassiter. One is a Christmas tree made of wood lattice from a pier that was damaged in the October flooding. Another is an empty window frame that has been decorated with wooden candles and dried magnolia seed pods.

Says Lassiter, "We've had a similar show for the past couple years and people love seeing how the rustic pieces work with traditional furniture and design. We have a lot of fun putting it together. And it's a terrific way to display the holiday pottery, which is in demand every year." She continues, "The gallery also puts up an eight-foot tree full of hand-crafted ornaments - clay, blown glass, wood, sea glass and more. The kids love choosing their ornaments right from the tree."

Each Saturday afternoon, during December, Sunset River Marketplace will hold an Open House with hot cider, wine, and assorted holiday treats. The public is invited at no charge.

On Dec. 12, the gallery will hold its first outdoor Holiday Art Market, in which approximately 25 of the gallery's exhibiting artists will set up booths in the parking lot to sell pottery, paintings, wood furniture and bowls, jewelry, photography, pillows, holiday cards, and more. Lassiter adds, "We'll even have some surfboards. This is a great idea for any last minute shoppers and we expect it to be a lot of fun."

There will be drawings for free gift certificates during the day. In the event of rain, the event will move inside the gallery.

Sunset River Marketplace is located on Beach Drive (Hwy. 179) in the historic fishing village of Calabash, NC, just north of the SC state line.

He explains: "Surrealism collapses the laws of space and time, permits all synchronicities and juxtapositions and nurtures the logic of the dream. The style of surrealism is a visual language that allows me - a southerner by birth who is also formally trained in the rigors and disciplines of science - to explore and express my obsessions with deep history, fascination with myth and symbol, and inexhaustible curiosity about color and form."
