Work by Ivan Ivanoff

Georgia, the exhibit ranges in experience and talent. The makers are from different sectors in their careers and with the university; students, professors, and alumni will have their work on display. Though the university has been an active member of the Southern Highland Craft Guild since 1977, this is its second collaborative effort for marketing and education in the main gallery. The previous exhibit was over seven years ago. For further information check our NC Institutional Gallery listings, call the Center at 828-298-7928 or visit (www.craftguild.org).

"Helen of Troy" by Luis Ardila

Queens University of Charlotte in Charlotte, NC, is presenting ARTE LATINO NOW 2017, on view in the Max L. Jackson Gallery/ Watkins Building, through Feb. 17, 2017. Sponsored by The Center for Latino Studies at Queens University of Charlotte in partnership with Queens' Departments of Art and World Languages, Art Sí and artist Edwin Gil, ARTE LATINO NOW seeks to highlight the exciting cultural and artistic contributions of Latinos in the United States. We invite artists who self-define as Latino and live and work in the United States to submit an original creative work in their medium of choice. Categories considered include New Media, Visual Arts, Performing Arts (including dance, theater, and music) and Creative Writing. Queens has been pleased to support this event for the last six years and is excited that entries have increasingly been submitted from across the United States. For further information check our NC Institutional Gallery listings or e-mail Michele Shaul at (shaulm@queens.edu).

"Axiel Collage" by Henry G. Michaux

The City of Charleston Office of Cultural Affairs, in Charleston, SC, is presenting Sculpt Mettle: Redux! A Henry G. Michaux Retrospective, on view at the City Gallery at Joseph P. Riley, Jr. Waterfront Park, through Feb. 26, 2017. This retrospective, which has traveled to galleries and museums across the Carolinas, showcases sculpture, ceramic, and graphic works created by Henry G. Michaux between the years of 1967 and 1997. This presentation is an eclectic collection which includes art pieces fabricated and sculpted with clay, wood, metals, fibers and found objects, as well as paintings, drawings and mixed media works. Dr. Michaux, former associate professor of Art at South Carolina State University, appropriates objects from one context and transposes them through creative tinkering into art objects that challenge the viewer to pause in reflective thought. For further information check our SC Institutional Gallery listings, call the gallery at 843-958-6484 or visit (www.charleston-sc.gov/citygallery).

Work by James Williams

The Columbia Museum of Art in Columbia, SC, is presenting Making Maps: The Art of James Williams, in the next installment of the Spoken Exhibition Series, on view through Mar. 12, 2017. Through a series of works drawing upon the ancient tradition of cartography, Williams acts as a traveler, using paint, ink, tape, graphite, and paper-weaving techniques to explore various spaces through maps of dense, layered color. This is the third and final iteration of Spoken, an exhibition series which highlights the unique perspectives and powerful voices of African-American artists, many of whom are represented in the museum's collection. For further information check our SC Institutional Gallery listings or visit (www.columbiamuseum.org).

Work by Fleming Markel

The Upstairs Artspace in Tryon, NC, opens the new year with three powerful exhibits featuring painting and sculpture by five highly respected and established artists from North and South Carolina - Fleming Markel and Dabney Mahanes, of Greenville, SC; Margaret Curtis of Tryon, NC; Veronika Hart of Hendersonville, NC; and Daniel Nevins of Asheville, NC. The three exhibits continue through Mar. 12, 2017. Fleming Markel's solo exhibit, titled Pent-up Pink, addresses cultural myths, especially those seeking to marginalize women. She achieves this with human-sized, 3D assemblages made with plexiglas, steel, mirrors, women's crafting materials, household objects, girls' toys and more. Veronika Hart and Dabney Mahanes had not met before their exhibit, but Tripping The Fantastic joins two painters whose hallmarks are bold color and deft brushwork in the creation of dramatic canvases. In their two-person exhibit Twisted, Margaret Curtis and Daniel Nevins present different bodies of work, yet they share an emotionally charged landscape between the human and natural worlds. Theatre Art Galleries in High Point, NC, is presenting SECOND LOOK: Recycled for the Sake of Art, featuring works by Kirkland Smith, Miles Purvis, Bryant Holsenbeck, and Catherine Edgerton, on view in the Main Gallery, through Apr. 1, 2017. Kirkland Smith of Columbia, SC, creates contemporary "Assemblages" from post-consumer materials. By using discarded objects as her "paint", she found an evocative way to deliver the message of the importance of reducing, reusing, and recycling. Environmental artist Bryant Holsenbeck, of Durham, NC, documents the "stuff of our society that we use once and throw away. Miles Purvis, also of Columbia, SC, is a painter who says she started creating art at a young age. Catherine Edgerton works with stained-glass, creating and gifting multi-media kaleidoscopes to people who struggle with mental health and addiction.
