During that time, she connected with the respect and love for all creation which is at the core of Native American spirituality. Her vessels are the essence of the spirituality she so strongly connects with.

Work by Barbara Warner

Elizabeth Snipes-Rochester is originally from Pickens, SC. She received her BA in Studio Art in 2003 from Furman University then attended Studio Art Centers International in Florence, Italy, where she received her Post-Baccalaureate Certificate in painting. Snipes-Rochester earned her MFA from Clemson University in 2007 and taught as Assistant Professor of Art in the painting and drawing area at Missouri State University before beginning her current position as Associate Professor of Art, teaching painting and drawing, at Lander University in Greenwood. She works in a range of 2-dimensional media that includes acrylic, oil, pencil, and pastel on paper, panel, or canvas.

Work by Anne Pesce

Also participating in the show are Phyllis Anne Pesce and Colleen McGhee. Pesce is a former elementary and high school art teacher. In describing her current work, she refers to the philosophy of Art as: art reflects nature and nature reflects art. Pesce has worked in a variety of media and produces photographs, functional ceramics, sculptures, and primitives. Her current work focuses on the art of Zentangle.

The Zentangle method is based on the act of drawing pattern and filling those patterns in with more pattern. It has been used by people as a form of self-help art therapy due to the meditative quality of sketching repeating designs. While some Zentangle artists use colors, this method traditionally sticks to black ink. It allows the artist to focus on the patterns instead of color composition. Pesce's Zentangle patterns often reflect her love of nature and sea life.

Colleen McGhee was born and raised in Greenwood and grew up attending the local public schools. She graduated from Lander University in 2014 with a BS in Visual Arts. Her current concentration is on clay and hand building. In addition, McGhee works as a freelance graphic designer. McGhee's work is often focused on functional objects. Her pieces are put together from torn and altered pieces of clay fulfilling her desire to find and repair flaws as she explores the beauty in imperfection.
