Aiken Center for the Arts in Aiken, SC, Features Works by D.S. Owens

The Aiken Center for the Arts in Aiken, SC, will present Spirit of Place, a solo exhibit by D.S. Owens, on view in the Aiken Artist Guild Gallery, from Apr. 2 - 27, 2012.

Work by D. S. Owens

Award winning photographer Owens believes the exhibit title exemplifies his love for his craft. "A single image taken at the perfect moment, capturing a majestic setting, gives the soul a feeling that the photo carries a spirit of its own," explains the artist.

Owens' love for photography began as a child when he received his first Brownie camera. During his tour of duty in the US

Navy, he developed an eye for capturing the beauty and uniqueness of nature. With the advent of digital photography his vision and creativity have flourished.

The photographer uses his art form to stimulate a reaction from the viewer which opens the viewer's eyes to a new look at the world around them. "By sharing these images I hope my work will bring to life a captured moment in time," shares Owens. His preferred subject matter includes nature, monochrome, abstract and the un-posed person.

As a self-taught photographer Owens has been featured in magazines and calendars and has won various awards in art shows including two Executive Director Awards from the Aiken Center for the Arts. Owens was selected by the South Carolina Artisan Center to be one of the "artist in Residence" to display and sell his work there.

Hitchcock Health Center in Aiken, SC, Offers Works by John Glave Jr.

The Hitchcock Health Center in Aiken, SC, in conjunction with the Aiken Artist Guild will present an exhibit of works by John Glave Jr., on view from Apr. 2 - 27, 2012.

Glave is a photographer who began his study of photography at the SUNY in Buffalo, NY in 1962. He began experimenting with digital point and shoot cameras while working in the New Mexico desert but quickly shifted to full digital capability when transferred to the High Desert of Southeast Idaho in 2008.

"I choose to compose/capture structure, textures and color through the lens; sort of a 'what you see is what you get' philosophy," relates the artist. He relies on the richness of the many technical variables and adjustments of the digital camera to render realism back into his images which the mind and eye accomplish automatically when viewing an actual scene.

Some Exhibits That Are Still On View

Our policy at Carolina Arts is to present a press release about an exhibit only once and then go on, but many major exhibits are on view for months. This is our effort to remind you of some of them.

The Franklin G. Burroughs-Simeon B. Chapin Art Museum in Myrtle Beach, SC, is presenting the exhibit, William Jameson: Woodland Textures, featuring 18 large oil paintings, on view through Apr. 26, 2012.

Jameson credits growing up surrounded by the natural beauty and rich history of South Carolina with inspiring his childhood ambition of becoming an artist. His introspective landscapes - he prefers to call them "explorations".

Work by William Jameson

Growing up in Anderson, SC, and now living in Saluda, NC, Jameson has always felt strong ties to his native region, and his works incorporate his passion for nature. But he also draws inspiration from a wide range of artists, from the Renaissance masterpieces of Titian to the chiaroscuro paintings of Caravaggio, the rich textures of Nicolai Fechin and the spectacular treatment of light by renowned American landscape painter Winslow Homer.

The Mint Museum in Charlotte, NC, is presenting the exhibit Jun Kaneko: In the Round, on view at the Mint Museum Uptown through Apr. 28, 2012. The exhibit was curated by Carla Hanzal, Mint Curator of Contemporary Art.

Kaneko is best known for his Dango sculptures. Each of these monumental sculptures is hand-built, and combines traditional ceramics techniques as well as the ancient Shinto concept of 'Ma' which loosely translates into 'attachment through space.' On each sculpture, Kaneko creates highly patterned surfaces comprised of rhythmic graphic elements—squares, lines, and dots—to infer connections: "To me, a pattern or color repeated, makes some kind of visual order. Even if I desire to use a line, an endless combination of lines is possible. The spaces between the marks contribute a great deal to the tonality of the finished work."
